

Bye Bye Plastic Bags

In 2013, two young women decided that they were going to do something about the plastic problem on their hometown island of Bali, and Bye Bye Plastic Bags was born. Bali is the world's second largest polluter when it comes to marine plastic, trailing only China.

Their mission is to empower people to learn what plastic pollution is doing to our ecosystems and give them a way to start reducing their plastic use in their communities. They accomplish this through education, campaigns, and political meetings. Bye Bye Plastic Bags envisions a world free of plastic bags, where the young generations are empowered to take action and empower others to join in the movement of a plastic-free planet.

Bye Bye Plastic Bags has become an international movement, with groups currently in 50+ locations around the world, all led by young people. Wilderness Travel strongly supports their efforts to fight plastic pollution, and we encourage those of you traveling on our snorkeling trips to Indonesia to support this program with an optional $50 per person donation, which will appear on your final invoice.
